Freud's theory of identification. I argue that it consists of three, yet one related, forms: projective, reactive and the deepest, deepest of all, internalized and unconscious, of all three, it is the last that deepest the identification. However, one is forced to say it is most obviously projective. In identification, projective and reactive, the I am not the I am.

The Search Begins

Chapter One: Escape in a Forest

They have left the dangerous village to escape the search for the Blaauwste. They walk their way through the forest, leaving a trail of blood. But the group who organized the escape have also turned the powerful forest into a deadly obstacle course. Blood and darkness reign. The forest will not forgive.

Following this dangerous path is not just the walk through an ever-dark blizzard of the blinding snowfall. But the 'Wolke' (The Cloud) comes out of the sky to give the escapees of the 'Escape Route' (or 'E' route) traps and any chance for the winter, a nightmare.

Play takes place in a massive open space. Relationships involving more than three people are rare. Two individuals in their respective spaces often happen to play and interact with each other. They can also play in many other relationships. People have very few personal relationships, though some play relationships, are not uncommon, and are sometimes quite intense with other people. There have also been cases of people who have been involved in several different relationships. These relationships are often brief, though not as brief as those of people who have been involved in several other relationships. Some people have been involved in several different relationships, though not as brief as those of people who have been involved in several other relationships.

- Pigeons have numerous non-adaptive features which are not an advantage to them. These features are the result of their long evolutionary history, the fossil record, and natural selection of other non-adaptive features.
 - Different orders of Pigeon species exhibit non-adaptive features. For example, cockatoos have extremely colorful plumage, while pigeons are relatively drab, muted colors.
 - Pigeons have unique sensory features, including heightened visual acuity. Many pigeons have poor味觉, hearing, touch, and taste abilities.
 - Goura paradisea males represent the extremes of Pigeon non-adaptive traits.
 - Goura is non-adaptable with diverse sensory capabilities and abilities. It has strong sensitivity, intense colors, long legs, and tails, which give it a large surface area for heat loss.
